How to maximize applications of microneedling RF in the treatment of facial aging and acne scar scarring at on session

The new microneedling RF with multiple evolutionary setting and tips such as adjustable penetrating depth, impedance feedback, monopolar and bipolar RF and pumping tips etc. allow us to create precise coagulation at different levels to achieve best results. However, facial aging presenting laxed sagging with concomitant folds and lines or acne scarring with different size and shape are sometimes difficult to be treated by EBD with significant improvement in few sessions. Here we propose how to approach the aging face and atrophic acne scar by using microneedling RF in terms of best treat area, depth of penetrating and energy setting to achieve maximal clinical effect in each session.
